Set the Stage for Success

Everyone wins when you effectively incentivize your employees — the organization benefits from their improved efforts and the employees receive a financial reward for their hard work. Although the logic is simple, in practice, effective performance management is quite difficult. Most managers dislike administering performance reviews and are poorly trained in giving positive and consistent feedback. Leadership often objects to offering bonuses when they are based on precedence, not accomplishment. Avoid implementing performance management systems that degenerate into expected bonuses or entitlements by tracking and quantifying employee performance.

Reward Top Performers

With SharedHR's performance management consulting, we help you develop a performance management system that rewards top performers, reinforces positive behaviors, and measures the execution of strategic objectives.

As part of our performance management package, we will:

- Help establish actionable annual strategic planning.
- Help develop company-specific financial data on the connection between forecast and performance initiatives.
- Link your performance measures with an incentive compensation program that reinforces performance in the long run.
- Formulate performance measures that evaluate, communicate, and reward the execution of strategic objectives.
- Coach your managers on how to give consistent feedback and how to measure achievement and improvement.
- Implement goal management software that makes it easy to consistently track, measure, and align goals.
